Welcome to iPRES 2017

As the lead organizing co-chair, I am delighted to host and welcome delegates to Kyoto for the 14th International Conference on Digital Preservation (iPRES) on September 25-29, 2017, under the theme of “Keeping Cultural Diversity for the Future in the Digital Space – from Pop-Culture to Scholarly Information.”

Kyoto is the former capital of Japan with more than thousand years’ of history and possesses rich resources in terms of traditional culture and pop-culture. It also has strong relationships with Asian countries through common research and business links. In keeping with previous years, iPRES2017 aims to contribute to the promotion of research and digital preservation practices for the global community. In particular, iPRES2017 focuses on pop-culture and Asian communities. Workshops and tutorials will provide opportunities for participants to share information, knowledge and best practices, and explore opportunities for collaboration.

Last but not least, I hope iPRES2017 will bear fruit in terms of future research. On behalf of the organizing committee, I express my sincere thanks and wishes to the organizers and participants of the Conference. I also hope you will take the opportunity to enjoy Kyoto and carry back good memories of your stay here.

Digital Curation of Historical and Cultural Resources in Japan(2)

歴史資料デジタル記録として何を記述すべきかー日本とアジアと世界ー

Organizer: Makoto GOTO( 国立歴史民俗博物館 National Museum of Japanese History)

Presenter: John ERTL, Yoshiko SHIMADZU, Shigeki MORO

日本における歴史資料保存の手法には様々なあり方がある。究極的に「何を未来に伝えるべきか」という論点は、現物だけではなくデジタルデータでも同様の課題を抱える。そこで、本セッションでは、デジタルデータ記録の前提となる「何を記録すべきか」「そのための歴史資料情報のデジタルでの記録の課題は何か」という根本の部分を考古学・文化財科学・デジタルの分野から考えたい。

There are a variety of methodologies for preserving historical resources in Japan. Ultimately, the main point “What and how can we predict the future?” matters not only the original resources but also digital data. This session addresses underlying problems, “What do we record?” and “What are the outstanding issues for information record from historical resources” from the scope of archaeology, scientific studies on cultural properties, and digital.

FAIR Data in Trustworthy Data Repositories

Ingrid DILLO(Data Archiving and Networked Services, Netherlands)

National and international funders are increasingly likely to mandate open data and data management policies that call for the long-term storage and accessibility of data. Open data and data sharing can only become a success if we put the concept of trust central stage. The certification of digital repositories is an important means to provide this trust to the different stakeholders involved. In this keynote 1 will talk about data sharing, repository certification and the concept of FAIR data.

Asian Session

Reports and Discussion

Moderator: Natalie PANG(National University of Singapore, Singapore)

Invited Speakers: Shuji KAMITSUNA(National Diet Library, Japan), Sophy Shu-Jiun CHEN(Academia Sinica, Taiwan), LEE Kee Siang(National Library Board, Singapore), Wararak PATTANAKIATPONG(Chiang Mai University, Thailand), Chito ANGELES(University of the Philippines Diliman, Philippines)

Countries in the Asia-Pacific region are very diverse in terms of culture, language and economic environments. Long-term management, keeping and use of digital resources is a common and pressing concern for many of these countries which are producing more and more digital resources. However, reports on digital preservation activities are lacking, especially from the countries in East and South-East Asia. This session is aimed to share up-to-date information about developments of digital archives and digital preservation in East and South-East Asia and to discuss issues on digital preservation in this region with the audience from other parts of the world.

This session will first present five talks by invited speakers from Japan, Taiwan, Philippines, Thailand and Singapore about digital preservation at the speakers' institutions and/or countries. Then, we solicit voluntary reports from other Asian countries followed by general discussions with the audience.

Operational Pragmatism in Digital Preservation

Establishing context-aware minimum viable baselines

Panel – Somaya LANGLEY, Anthea SELES, Andrea BYRNE, Dinesh KATRE, Jones LUKOSE and Bertrand CARON.

Undertaking active digital preservation, holistically and thoroughly, requires substantial infrastructure and resources. National archives and libraries across the Western world have established, or are working towards maturity in digital preservation (often underpinned by legislative requirements). On the other hand, smaller collectives and companies situated outside of memory institution contexts, as well as organisations in non-Western and developing countries, are struggling with the basics of managing their digital materials. This panel continues the debate within the digital preservation community, critiquing the development of digital preservation practices typically from within positions of privilege. Bringing together individuals from diverse backgrounds, the aim is to establish a variety of 'bare minimum' baselines for digital preservation efforts, while tailoring these to local contexts.

Endeavors of Digital Game Preservation in Japan- A Case of Ritsumeikan Game Archive Project

Akinori NAKAMURA (College of Image Arts and Sciences, Ritsumeikan University, Japan)

In 1998, one of the first academic institutions, which focuses on pursuing the appropriate ways of the video game preservation, the Game Archive Project has been established. The sentiment toward the digital games being products rather than “viable cultural artifact”, the efforts have started slowly. In our continuous efforts to enlighten academic as well as the professional community for this cause, however, the importance of the preservation activities has been embraced in both domestic and international communities, leading to being a part of the national project for the creating of the Media Art Database by the Agency of Cultural Affairs, Japan. The present paper attempt to introduce an overview of our efforts.
